IT Infrastructure Migration

PROBLEM

One of our previous clients called us to augment their internal team and complete a total environment migration project. We were tasked with migrating and consolidating existing domains into a single, proper domain, migrating their aging VMware environment to current versions, refresh and upgrade their entire network, build out a new VLAN structure based on their needs, and migrate email and applicable systems to the Office 365 and Azure cloud platforms, among other tasks.

SOLUTION

The team at Its IT began by investigating, documenting, and analyzing their overall IT environment—including active directory, file servers, RADIS servers, and more. We implemented Cisco Meraki network equipment and new Cisco Hyper-flex servers to build out their network stack and upgraded and migrated their software applications. We also implemented a wireless point-to-point connection back to the main server to serve as a backup.

RESULT

All these changes and upgrades were implemented without significant downtime, meaning business could continue. All new communications were redirected to the new build to maintain operations. This resulted in more efficient, robust systems that enhanced productivity and minimized costs along the way. Once the project was complete, the It's IT team stayed on to train internal staff, resolve outstanding issues, and provide support.
